ABSTRACT

A heat sink is configured to support an edge of a circuit card. The heat sink comprises a thermally conductive base, a plurality of thermally conductive heat dissipating fins extending from the base, and one or more recesses at least partially defined by at least one of the fins or by the base. The recesses are configured to support the edge of the circuit card.